

Meet The FARMERS

BOTTICELLO FARMS

In 1976, young Shelly Botticello had the idea to set up a roadside picnic table piled with tomatoes from her father Butch's backyard garden.

Her selling spirit spurred a two generation, 300 acre landscape now known as Botticello Farms located in Manchester, CT. Butch's son Tony and son-in-law David now harvest sweet corn, tomatoes, squash, peppers and pumpkins among other bountiful crops.

For Tony, the best aspects of farming are clean living, good vegetation, and honest work.

"As long as I've had a driver's license I've been delivering to FreshPoint." ~ Tony Botticello

