

What has Mines Dining Been Up to?

While life on campus certainly looks different this academic year, the Mines Dining team has been working relentlessly to ensure that students are receiving nutritious meals to fuel their studies all while keeping students safe and healthy during these uncertain times. We believe that campus dining is the social and cultural soul of campus life here at Mines. Therefore, we've put protocols in place to keep students safe while either dining in or taking out food. Some of the protocols include mandatory masks when not seated and eating, plexiglass in front of cashiers and servers, social distancing and directional signage to guide guests through our facilities, hand sanitizing stations, clean table cards to indicate which tables are clean and which need tended to, and expanded grab and go options, just to name a few.

Another addition to the dining scene at Mines this fall semester has been the introduction of Grubhub on campus. The implementation of the app has allowed students, faculty and staff to mobile order from select on campus restaurants for pickup or delivery. This has helped reduce wait times and potential lines during peak hours.

The work does not stop here though. Our team also developed a COVID response plan to feed on-campus students who need to quarantine or isolate, due to COVID impacts. We've partnered with Residence Life to deliver meals to students with meal plans so that they get the adequate nutrition that they need, including meeting individual specific dietary needs. Our quarantine response has truly been a collaboration between various dining and campus departments. The COVID pandemic has been a true testament to the creativity and flexibility that is possible with just a little bit of teamwork.

If you haven't made it over to any of our dining venues yet, be sure to stop in soon! Our team looks forward to serving the many familiar faces again and looks forward to meeting all the new students on campus.

We thank you for your patience and your participation in keeping the Mines community safe and healthy during these challenging times. Remember, Mines Climbs Together!
